Records of a Pioneer Family.

It is not without a wide interest that family pride produces the record of its collective past, for in any such included the intimate details of fireside and homestead which are all too commonly lacking to the ore formal histories of the larger units of society. One factor enters into the production of family histories in this land of ours which in itself tends to endow the product with a higher quality than in other and better documented lands. Without the custom of primogeniture to preserve for long periods the line of ancestors, without hereditable titles necessitating the keeping of documents of succession from the original patent, who ver in this counendeavors to complete a family record must be filled with enthusiasm and this enthusiasm results in the production of a work which never is allowed to become perfunctory in its performance.

This is essentially the quality of the Work of Mrs. Rebeat W. De Forest in A Walloon Family in America (Houghton Mifflin Company). The family never come to such high estate in the affairs of the colonies and of the nation as certain of the lines, of Massachusetts, of Virginia and of South Carolina.
